- Time : 19:00-21:00

- Seminar Highlights : “Design for Safety” is crucial for construction and maintenance works safety by early involvement of all stakeholders in hazard identification and mitigation at early design stages of project. To enhance the effectiveness of this initiative, the Development Bureau (DEVB) had appointed Occupational Safety and Health Council (OSHC) to launch a review programme to the “Guidance Notes and Worked Examples of Design for Safety” in 2013. Good design practices such as maintenance corridor on external facades, catwalks and maintenance platform for ceiling mounted services, precast off-site fabrication, and twin-pipe system for sewer maintenance, etc. are some of the risk mitigation measures that can be used for better safety management in the whole project life cycle.
- Speaker : Dr. Winson Yeung is the Principal Consultant of the Occupational Safety and Health Council (OSHC) and is an experienced safety and health professional of over 25 years. He monitors the development and management of the “Housing Authority Safety Audit Scheme”, “Housing Society Safety Audit Scheme” and “Independent Safety Audit Scheme for Hong Kong – Zhuhai – Macao Bridge (HZMB) Projects”. Dr. Yeung had been involved in the development of “Guidance Notes and Worked Examples of Design for Safety” for the Development Bureau which was launched in 2016.
